Gladioli

No home without a garden No garden without glads.

This year, as in the past, our aim has been to grow and offer you only the best. While we are continually testing and adding to our list the new varieties of merit, we still grow the better grades of standard varieties.

Plant some ferns along the shady side of your house or some cosmos in your garden. Use these greens with a few glads and you will have a basket or vase of rare beauty.

Plant a garden of glads and be glad

Dozen sold at 10 times single price.

Culture

Plant in the spring after danger of frost is over. The soil should be rich and mellow, spaded deep, and enriched with fertilizer. Plant the bulbs four to eight inches apart in the row and from three inches deep in heavy soil to five inches in lighter soil. Keep them well watered and give them plenty of cultivation. Do not allow a hard crust to form around the plants.

Dig in the fall after foliage begins to turn brown or after several heavy frosts. Cut tops off just above the bulb and lay out thin for a few days to thoroughly dry. Then remove the old bulb and roots, put them in basket or trays not over four inches deep and store in your fruit or vegetable cellar away from heat. Do not tie your bulbs in a paper bag or keep them in any kind of deep tin receptacle as they will mold and rot in either.

Do not be deceived with the thought that Gladioli will grow in any soil or under any conditions for they will not; any soil that will grow potatoes will produce fine flowers. They will not thrive under a tree or among shrubbery nor along a cellar wall or against the garage. The glory of the noon day sun is needed to increase their growth and enhance their beautiful colorings.
